How Hal comes to Marry His Sister's Husband

By B.C.

Heather sat at the kitchen table drinking coffee and taking a break from her housework. She finally began to adjust and get a schedule worked out to be able to get everything done in an orderly fashion. Then she heard the baby crying and went in to get her. She returned and sat holding Alex and began breast-feeding the child. She still couldn't get used to this particular strange and completely awkward obligation that had become an everyday task in her daily life. It was just something that she'd never dreamed or imagined that she'd ever be doing. She looked out the window of their new home and wondered how it was that she had come to this incredibly strange and foreign life: Before her mother sent her from sunny

California to Indiana to help Gil with the baby after her sister died in an automobile accident - two months after little Alexandria was born - Heather was Hal, Gail's younger brother. A naïve 18 yr. old boy in Jr. College. Here is Heather's story, though, from the beginning.

The Beginning.

Gil Simons met Gail Harris in college at Texas A&M. Gail was a beautiful blonde California girl majoring in commercial design. She was 5'8" tall weighed 115 lbs. she had blue eyes, blonde hair measured 34-24-36 had perky breasts and a body to die for. She had style and class beyond her years and dressed in the latest style clothes all the time. She wouldn't be caught out of her room without full makeup and hair just right. She was a Cheerleader as well as a 3.50 grade point avg. student. As you might imagine she was also quite popular. Gil on the other hand was from the Midwest. Grew up in farm country until his parents were killed in an airplane crash. He was left a tidy sum from the accident but, there was only an elderly aunt left to raise him his last year of high school and he went on to get a football scholarship at A&M and was studying Engineering. Gil was 6'2" and 190 lbs. and it was through athletics that he and Gail met and started dating. They became exclusive and married right after graduation. They moved back to Gil's home town in Indiana where he took over the construction company that his father had owned before his death.

Things were magical that first year. Gil jumped right into the work and found things were much better than he thought work wise. He was getting lots of jobs he was quoting and business was good. Gail was also very happy that she found work in her field too, right away and got hired by a huge firm that laid out planned and decorated commercial buildings. It just couldn't get better, both were happy in their jobs they bought a new house which Gail designed and decorated and then the best news yet. Gail was pregnant with their first child.

Then two months after little Alexandria was born, tragedy struck, Gil got the call from the police as he was out on a work site. There had been an accident and his wife and baby were being rushed to the hospital in Ft Wayne. Gil sped to the hospital in record time, only to find that his wife, the love of his life, didn't make it. The baby was fine as the baby seat protected her in the crash. A drunk driver ran a red light and broad sided Gail's car on the driver's side. Gil fell apart and was in shock. He contacted Gail's parents and they made arrangements to leave as soon as possible. Her Dad had to line up someone to watch his business while they were gone. Gail's parents Hal Sr. and Jean Harris owned their own grocery store and both worked their many hours a day, year around.

So Hal and Jean and son Hal Jr. flew in for the funeral and helped Gil through the next week and a half. He was still a mess after they had to leave and wasn't sure what he would do. Gail's mother offered to take little Alex back with them but, Gil couldn't stand the thought of being apart from her, especially now. They were all in a spot as the Harris's couldn't leave their store unattended for long and had no choice but, to return to California, which was too far to be of any help to Gil or their granddaughter, and they really couldn't keep little Alex in a grocery store all day long either. Gil told them he'd stay home with her until he could figure something out.

It was hard and Gil cried a lot those next several weeks. He had no idea how hard it was to take care of a newborn 24-7 and was losing ground on his own health worrying what to do. Jean called him every other day to check on him and cried along with him. She was just about to tell her husband that she was going to have to go back and help out with her grand baby, when they realized that Gail's younger brother Hal Jr. just finished his last finals and was done for the summer. Normally he would help at the store but, Jean told Gil that Hal Jr. could come and help for a month or so and then she'd come and relieve him. She said by then she'd hire someone to help at the mom and pop store and could get away for as long as it took to get Gil settled. She told him she knew it wasn't the best plan but, she just couldn't leave Hal Sr. all alone to run the store as he'd had a heart attack a year ago and was still getting himself back up to full speed.

Hal Jr. still wet behind the ears boarded a plan by himself having no idea what he was getting himself into as headed to Indiana. Hal for some reason thought that he was going to be helping his brother in law out by working at Gil's construction company. He couldn't believe his ears after Gil picked him up and the airport and got back home and found that Gil expected him to watch the baby, while Gil got back to work at his company. "You want me to baby-sit an infant," Hal said in shock. "You do know that I'm only 18 and know almost nothing about babies, except maybe where they come from." He said. "You can't be serious...are you, Gil?" he said hopefully.

"Hal I thought that your Mother explained all this to you before you left to come here? Believe me I know that this is crazy but, I don't have any choice. Your Mom is going to try and come as soon as she can hire enough help to assist your Dad in their store. We're just going to have to try and do the best we can. I'll be here every minute that I can and we'll have to learn together somehow. I'll even look around and see if I can get someone to come and help you out until you get the hang of things and we'll just do that for as long as it takes. I know that your sister would be so proud of you for even trying to take care of the thing that meant the world to her. Her baby Alex.” he told the still frightened youth. “Look I’ve spoken to Mrs. French next door and she says she’ll look in on you from time to time and that if you need her just call. Her number is on the fridge.”

“This is crazy. I’m not exactly the domestic type of guy to start with. I know that I don’t look like your average macho guy with my long hair and smaller body but, trust me I’m a guy and like all guy type things and taking care of a house and a new born baby are a long way from anything that know the first thing about. I like sports and going out and partying with my pals. I was looking forward to doing that this summer. A bunch of my friends that went away to school are home for the summer and we were going to get together and be wild and free for a couple of months before going back to school in the fall.” Hal said.

“Look do you think that if I had any other options right now that I’d even consider leaving you with my 2 month old daughter. I’m in a real life bind her Hal and like it or not you’re the only family Alex and I have. I need you to reach down deep inside and pull up the nerves and strength to pull this together until we can find another way. I don’t have to tell you what this means to me and I’ll make it up to you somehow some way. I look at you and I see so much of your sister in you. I know that you can do this. Kids a lot younger than you have had to take care of many younger siblings in life and I just know that you can do this if you’ll try.” Gil said trying to convince himself as much as Hal about this whole thing.

“Of course I’m going to try Gil, I loved my sister with all my heart and I love my niece and you too. I’m going to need a lot of help though. You can start by showing me around the house so I know where stuff is at and then teach me to change Alex and feed her. I'll need to know how to mix up her formula and how often to feed her. Oh dear God help me.....I'm afraid I'll hurt her somehow by accident." Hal said.

"We're going to have to just take this one step at a time. I forgot that Gail was still breast-feeding Alex and that's why she hasn't been taking the bottle all that well. We'll get through this though...we have to, because I don't have any other choice. Come on I'll show you around the house first and show you where everything is." He said

They went through the house room by room with Gil pointing out where everything was that Hal would need for the next day. Gil ordered take out and they sat in the family room watching a ball game and eating pizza and beer. Then Gil remembered that Hal wasn't quite 19 yet and got him a Pepsi instead.

They set up the guest room for Hal and Gil helped him make the bed and get things ready. The baby would sleep in with Gil, as she at least slept through the night pretty well so far. As Hal asked Gil where his trunk was with all his clothes and other belongings, Gil turned and said, "Oh Shit, I was so distracted and upset and glad to see you that I left them sitting there on the floor where we met." I'll try and get over there tomorrow and pick them up. I'm sure they put them in unclaimed luggage and they will be ok until I get there." Gil said hoping he was right.

Hal took a shower and Gil came in and told him he was leaving him fresh towels and a new toothbrush. "I'm leaving you one of my tee shirts to sleep in but my underpants are way too big for you so you'll have to go commando until we get your stuff or you wash your stuff out. I'm going to bed now while she's asleep so I'll see you in the morning." Gil said and shut the door behind him.

Hal stood in the shower for a long time, letting the hot water rush over him soothing his nerves and wondering how in the world he was going to pull this off. "What do I know about babies? He kept asking himself, Hell I'm still a baby myself. I don't know how these young teens that have babies do it. Well God willing I'm going to be finding out fast." He said getting out and drying off. As he reached for the T-shirt the Gil left for him he laughed to himself as he swam in it. It almost looked like a dress or nightgown. "I know I'm small but, I didn't think I was that small compared to Gil." He said.

Hal had trouble getting to sleep thinking about and worrying about the next day's agenda. When he woke it felt as though he'd just fallen asleep. Gil wasn't up yet so Hal went in and got the coffee started just like Gil showed him yesterday. His feet were cold and he found a pair of his sister's slippers in the bathroom and slipped them on. He was pouring himself a cup of coffee when Gil came in. Gil stopped in his tracks seeing Hal from behind. His long blonde hair the oversized t-shirt and Gail's slippers. From this angle for a minute he thought he was seeing his wife standing there. He walked up and put his hand on her shoulder, scaring Hal and causing him to jump around and almost spill coffee on Gil. "Oh My God...you scared the shit out of me, I'm so sorry I didn't even know that you were up." Hal said.

"No it's my fault, I thought you were Gail for a minute there I must be losing it. The hair the t-shirt and slippers, I'm sorry it just threw me for a minute. I just can't believe that she's not here with me just like every day. It still doesn't seem real to me, God I miss her." He said.
