No Choice for Allen

By BC

Allen and his sister Alice had a wonderful life as kids. They had successful parents, who were both lawyers with the ability to provide them anything that they wanted. They had the best of everything, as they lived in a very upscale neighborhood and went to the best schools. Allen was 10 years old and Alice was 12 years old. They wore only the latest styles in clothes and their house was one of the biggest on their street. They had a maid, a head butler and a nanny that had been with the family since Alice was born. They loved Beth their nanny as she watched over them as a Mother hen.

Both kids were smart and did very well in school. They were just beginning to find their way in what interested them most in extra circulars. Alice chose the clarinet while Allen with help from Mom was taking up the piano. Both participated in the school band and loved it.

Alice inherited her father's genes and was tall and dark haired while Allen much to his chagrin inherited his mother's genes and was rather small and blonde headed with a face that was way too cute for a boy, and when they were alone Alice loved to play dress up and she could make Allen look almost angelic with very little effort.

Things were great for the Lanes, and as promised to make up for all the times that Mom and Dad were away from home tied up with this case or that. They were headed on a spring break family vacation, just the four of them.

They packed up and left the next day for the Virgin Islands. They went island hopping visiting the lessor populated tourist traps. They did manage to scuba dive in the sparkling blue green waters and collect shells along the shores of the beaches. They ate out at the best restaurants and all worked on their tans. It didn't take long in the hot spring sun to develop some major tan lines. The kids watched the huge cruise ships coming into port with thousands of passengers on them, waiting to come to shore.

Then suddenly without unloading the ships all headed back out to sea. Dad asked around and found out that there was a rouge storm kicking up without warning. He didn't see this coming as there was no storms predicted. The man told Dad that they should find shelter. He asked where the shelters were, and he got a jeep to take them to the closest one. One after another they tried only to find out that they were packed to the max and there was no room. "Will you take the children and we will find another place."

"Yes I think that we can squeeze the little kids in, but, I'm so sorry that if you came too we wouldn't be able to even close the storm doors."

"We'll go with you Daddy, we want to stick together." Alice begged. "No honey you go here now and I'll be back for you soon. This will all blow over fast and then we'll be together again." Dad told her and rushed back to the Jeep and they took off and Allen and Alice never saw their parents again. The jeep no sooner pulled away when the giant 25 foot wave washed them away and as the wave retreated it took the Lanes back out to sea never to be found again.

The kids had no money or ID's, and didn't know what to do. They walked for days to all of the shelters through the debris, hungry and thirsty looking for their parents but, without any luck at all. People here on the island all tried to help each other out and it was this spirit of kindness that saved the kids' lives. They were given food and water and these people helped look for their Mom and Dad with no luck.

It was three days later that the Red Cross showed up and began helping the injured and hungry. They brought in Machines to help dig the mostly destroyed building that lay in a heap on the ground.

Finally, Alice got the attention of a Red Cross nurse and told her that they were from LA and were here on Vacation and that they haven't been able to find their parents since the storm.

The Nurse addressed their scrapes and bruises and then got Allen and Alice something to eat as she filled out a profile on each of them. Where did they live, did they have anyone back home? Grandparents, Aunts or Uncles, older brothers or sisters? The nurse then checked out their stories and found that they had no one back home. She made arrangements to fly the kids back home, and for now they were placed in foster care shelter with several other kids. It took a while but, was finally decided that the very expensive house would be sold and divided in a trust fund for each of them to be paid out on their 25th birthday.

This was the first time that they lived in the way other unfortunate kids had to live. They lost all the luxury's they'd been born into and had until this time in their lives. No more pampering nannies, no servants, on million dollar home with their own rooms and bathrooms. Yes it was going to be quiet an adjustment for each of them. They got in their share of trouble and fights with others never having to live a normal life, or one like many of these underprivileged kids. The other kids also resented them for the spoiled lives that they were born into.

Weeks and then months went by and the two Lanes children still resented having to wear good will or hand me down clothes, or the fact that they couldn't go to their own school, and had to be home schooled like the rest of them by the head mistress here at the orphanage.

Then one day Ms. Withers called them into her office. There was a handsome man dressed well and a pretty lady sitting there. They were introduced and it was explained to Alice and Allen that the Kelly's wished to take them home on a trial bases through foster care and if it worked out.....adopt them!

Neither of the kids were too keen on the idea but, neither were they happy living here in the orphanage. Hearing the word trial, Alice spoke up for both of them and agreed. She also knew by now that there was always the chance of being split up as she'd already seen other siblings have that happen to them. As a matter of fact being kept together was sometimes harder that being adopted at all.

They packed their meager belongings and went home with the Kelly's. on the ride Ms. Kelly (Marge) told them how long that they've wanted children of their own, but, were just never blessed and they were really excited about becoming Alice and Allen's parents. "The first thing that we need to do is get you some decent clothes, after hearing about your story it's a miracle that you escaped with your lives let alone your clothes. I never did learn why they couldn't retrieve some of your nice things from the house before they sold it." She said

"Well actually they did bring us some things but, we were made to share them with the other kids. Most of them were designer styles and the older kids helped themselves to them and didn't return them to us." Alice told her.

"Well honey everything that we buy you may not always be designer, but, they will be clean and stylish and you'll fit in with the kids in your new school. We are so very sorry for your loss and want you to know that we will not try to ever make you forget your parents, but, we hope that you'll come to think of us as a family. As you learn to trust us I want you to know that you can always come to me with anything that is bothering you." Marge said.

AS they approached their new home the kids were looking out the window and each thinking that this might just be ok, living with the Kelly's, it sure beat the heck out of living at the orphanage. Inside the house was clean and very tidy and they found that they each had their own bedrooms even though this place wasn't as big as their old home.

The very next day Marge took the kids shopping for new clothing and she pretty much let Alice pick out most of her things. Allen on the other hand was a little disappointed as he felt that the things that Marge picked for him were a little on the immature side. He also argued when Marge took them both to a jewelry store and got their ears pierced, but, in the end Allen walked out with both ears sporting new diamond studs.

Now that the adoption was final and the children were to be a permanent part of the family and their names were changed to Kelly, Marge was the happiest that she'd ever been. This was a dream come true for her.

They were enrolled in the new Private school and Alice seemed to adjust faster than Allen could, but both began to study hard and slowly make new friends. As the weeks and months rolled by Allen's hair began to grow longer and longer. At first he thought it was really cool and made him feel like super hero or pro athlete he saw that many of the other boys had long hair but, his just kept growing and he eventually asked Mom (as Marge wished to be called) on many occasions, if he could get a haircut or at least a trim.

“Yes dear I made an appointment for you on Saturday at my hair dresser.” She told him and he didn't know at that time the difference between a barber and a hair dresser, and these were the early signs of when his life would began to change, in ways that he could never imagine.

As he walked out he saw himself in the mirror and couldn't see where they had taken any off at all. The long trusses now had a spiral curl in them and his eye brows were not just neatened up as the beautician was telling him, they now had an arch and were much thinner than before. With his soft features and new hairdo he looked for all the world like a pretty young girl.....more than that he bordered on beautiful.

“Mom that didn't help a bit now I really look like a girl. I don't like this at all, as I'm a boy and I want to look like one. I want to go home and cut this long hair off myself.” Allen told her.

“You'll do no such thing young man that was a very expense haircut and there's a very good reason why I've had this done the way it is. We'll be able to do all kinds of fun things with it, and I think you'll grow to like it as well. We have a few more appointments today before we are done.”

With those words, Allen tried to figure out where this was all heading, just as they pulled into a place called the doll house. Once inside Allen felt really out of place as he looked around while Mom talked to this other lady. All he could see were fancy looking dresses, and wigs and shoes of all sizes and styles, some with straps, some with heels, and others shiny flats.

When Mom came back she told them that they were going to play a little dress up game. Alice told Mom that she was too big for games like these and that she much preferred to play sports because she was not the real girly type of girl. Then when Allen jumped in and said “What about me.....I’m an actual boy and I’ve no business being in here at all.”

“Allen honey I would never do anything to hurt you or purposely embarrass you. This is a weekend thing only and I so hoped that you’d allow me this one simple little favor and play along with me. No one will ever need know that it’s you and I promise on Monday when you go back to school you’ll look just like the young boy that you always do, or at least as much as you can. You don’t know just how beautiful you are.” Mom told him

“That’s just it Mom. I already have a hard enough time taking all the kidding that I take over my looks. I on many occasions get mistaken for a girl as it is. I’m always the last to get picked on team sports or gym class, and what you’re asking, if it’s what I think it is, surely does nothing for my self-esteem or ego.” He told her.

“Well humor me just this one time and if you don’t see what I see, or think it’s fun, then I won’t ask you again.” She said.

“I don’t know Mom I just don’t believe that I should even be in this place, I would die if anyone from school ever saw me in here let alone playing dress up with you or for you.” Allen said.

“Nonsense Allen, not that many people even know you at this point and besides, this place has private booths and no one at all will see you.” She replied.

Finally Mom took him by the hand and almost drug him to one of the back booths. “That’s enough Ellie, if you won’t cooperate than I’ll force your hand and dress you myself and drag you all over town so everyone can see you. Now I’m not asking you for an arm or leg, just a little cooperation and we can have fun with this, just to see how you look dressed up all pretty, like you were in a beauty contest.” She told him.

Bell the owner of the shop then took his measurements which were easy to do as he really had no girl-ish shapes at his age. Then the night mare began. He was given a pair of white girl’s panties and hurried to pull them on for modesties sake. Next came a matching white vest. Allen wanted to die when he saw the dress they were pulling over his head and down into place. He could feel them buttoning up the buttons on the back of the little girls dress. Mom then pulled on a pair of white ruffled socks as he could hardly been down in the dress. She then slipped on a pair of patent leather shoes and latched the strap across the foot.

Then if that wasn’t humiliating enough this other lady came in and told him that her name was Dee. “I’ll be doing your make up today and unless you want to walk out looking like a clown, I need you to follow my orders and hold still for me.” She told him.

As Dee went to work on his makeup she said. “It’s my understanding that you are going to be in the little Miss Beauty pageant coming up soon. I don’t usually predict these things but, honey with your face and looks and a little training you are going to be a shoe in.”

“Great that’s just what every boy wants to hear, and nobody said anything to me about being in any old beauty pageant, this is just a onetime thing for my Mom.” He said.

Dee darkened his long eye lashes that he’d inherited from his birth mom. Then used a black eye liner to outline his upper and lower eye lids. She then blended in several shades of eye shadow and then used an eye brow pencil to darken his brows. She used a rose colored powder to brush onto his cheeks giving him the look of higher cheek bones. Then she out lined his lips with a lip pencil and colored them in with a red lip cream using a brush as if painting a mural. She then finished with some lip gloss leaving his lips shiny and smooth. She then brushed is long natural blonde hair out and let the long bouncy curls rest on his shoulders. A few spritzes of a sweet flowery perfume and she declared him done. His face had not one single blemish.

When Mom and Ms. Bell saw him they were speechless for several moments. “Wow.....Dee, you’ve done a wonderful job.” Mom finally said.

“No.....it was way too easy, being that this young lady was already beautiful before I even started. Allen looked in the mirror and was himself in total shock at the image looking back at him. There was this beautiful young girl looking back where his face should have been.

“That’s it then Marge you have a week to get her ready for the first contest coming up next Saturday in Spring Dale. You’ll have to work each day after school to learn what’s expected of the contestants. I’m telling you though that Allie here is a shoe in to win this without any doubt at all. Now would you rather be called Allie or Ellie honey? Jean Bell asked.

“Mom I can’t do this and I don’t want to do this” Allen said not being able to take his eyes off of the image in the mirror. “Besides I look like I’m about 5 or 6 years old.” He said.

“That’s the point honey and it’s even more reason that no one will recognize you, plus your brain might be saying NO but, your body and heart are saying YES.” Mom said.

Mom filled out the application and handed them back to Jean along with the entry fee. “I’ve waited so long for this opportunity and we are going to make the most of it, I can assure you of that.” She said and took one of the booklets on what will be expected of each contestant, such as walking, and where to stand, how to do a little twirl with one hand on her hip and some other different beauty queen stances and on and on.

Allen dreaded the ride home in this ridiculous costume with full makeup, so that Daddy could see for himself that he was wrong and that Allen could now fool anyone. Allen didn’t disappoint Mom as Dad didn’t believe that this was really Allen. He was sure that they were trying to pull a fast one and put one over on him. Then Ellie (as they’d decided on) went over and climbed up on Daddy’s lap and gave him a kiss on the cheek. “Yes it’s really me Daddy, Ms. Bell did this to me and now I’m going to be in some dumb old beauty contest and I don’t want to do this as I’m a boy not some dumb old girly girl, and on top of that I’m ten years old and I’m in the 4th grade and they want me to act like I’m a 7 year old girl just so I can be in this pageant next week in Spring Dale where ever that is.” Ellie said.

“I know son, but, it’s just for the one week end. Try and think of it as kind of a Halloween costume and it will be fun. I’m sure that the other boys in the pageant feel the same, so you won’t be the only one there in costume.” Dad said. “You know.....we were originally only going to adopt Alice, but, she really isn't the kind of girl to be in pageants and then your Mom saw you. You were just the right size, you were humble and most of all you were beautiful even as a boy. So that's how much she loved you right off. You'll look back on this experience one day when you are older and laugh about it." Dad told Ellie

"Come with me now my precious little darling and let's go wash up and get your makeup off. Give Daddy a kiss and a little curtsey like Madam Bell showed you earlier." Mom said.

A confused little Allen kissed his new Daddy and said good night I love you then got up and did his best to give Daddy a curtsey and he and Mom were off to the bathroom to remove his makeup. "Allen honey don't worry this will end soon and in the mean time I can't get over just how beautiful you really look, I'll be there cheering you on and I just know in my heart if you'll give it a chance that you'll really have fun with this. It will be like playing a character in a play or a movie, and you'll be the star." Alice told her little brother and gave him a hug.

After his makeup was off and Mom unbuttoned the dress and pulled it off over his head she started to help him remove his unmentionables he grabbed her hand and said "Please Mom a little privacy I'm not a little baby and I can finish undressing and take a shower."

"Ok darling I'll bring you in some sleep wear and leave it on the vanity." And she stepped out and Allen hurried and finished undressing and jumped in the shower. He heard Mom moving about the bathroom. "Ellie honey that's no way to take care of your underclothes, I don't expect that you would know all these things that females know but, I do expect you to learn as we go along." She said
